

Purpose

The purpose of SISTC Equity and Diversity Policy is to provide a framework to ensure that the strategic direction and associated activities of SISTC enshrine its commitment to social justice principles, and the building of global human capital in an equitable way. The Policy establishes the equity and diversity settings in which SISTC's business will be conducted. In particular, the Policy focuses on five inter-related areas:

- defining the principles of equity and diversity as it relates to SISTC
- defining equity group staff and student cohorts
- designing and delivering its operations in support of these cohorts
- providing financial support for equity and diversity cohorts (where appropriate)
- recruitment of staff within an equity and diversity workforce model

The SISTC Discrimination, Bullying and Sexual Harassment Policy and Procedures complements this Policy and sets out how this diversity is to be supported by the daily behaviour of staff and students.

Principles

SISTC is committed to the recruitment of international and domestic students from diverse cultural backgrounds, including indigenous students. SISTC can reasonably expect to start recruiting domestic students only after receiving FEE-HELP approval. We are committed to creating a learning environment which is shaped inter-alia by the richness of student interaction which comes from studying within a multi-cultural cohort environment.

SISTC is cognisant of the investment and family dislocation inherent in international students acquiring an Australian tertiary education. SISTC recognises furthermore the challenges for students associated with acquiring such an education in a language which is not their first. In this context, SISTC has a strong sense of social responsibility as an education provider in terms of making such opportunities available to international students and in providing the necessary level of literacy, learning and personal support in a way that is bespoke to this student cohort.

Once SISTC is able to offer FEE-HELP for domestic students, we will seek to recruit domestic students from regional, low socioeconomic and indigenous backgrounds with offers of scholarships and discounted fees.

In its focus on developing global-citizen employees for the global workforce, SISTC understands the importance of creating a diverse student cohort which reflects the emerging global workforce. Moreover, through the operation of its Student Financial Scholarships Program, SISTC seeks to assure this class room diversity by supporting students in their education journey in a way that encourages their academic achievement and advancement. SISTC's Student Financial Scholarship strategy is an expression of SISTC's commitment to promoting social equity in its operations, and to contributing to the building of global social capital in the outlook, skills and focus of students. The operation of this principle represents an important expression of practical support in delivering SISTC's unique set of Graduate Attributes (as described in the SISTC Graduate Attributes Policy).

In terms of student support more broadly, SISTC's design, delivery and support arrangements for its programs reflect an emphasis on face-to-face delivery, and small lecture and tutorial groups in a model where student learning takes place in an interactive, small group, tutorial atmosphere. SISTC is committed to providing bespoke and culturally sensitive support, including the linking of students with external cultural/community support groups and facilitating their ability to stay connected with their home country support networks.

From a staffing perspective, SISTC understands the importance of ensuring that its teaching and support staff profile is consistent with the profile of its student cohort. To provide a student-centred experience for students, who in many cases are studying far from home in an unfamiliar environment in a language not their first, SISTC is committed to ensuring students are able to access staff members who can empathise with their circumstances and can provide a dimension of support in the student's first language where necessary, and consistent with the student's cultural background.

The Workforce Plan for SISTC more broadly reflects a similar strategy of ensuring a diverse workforce which is consistent with and broadly reflects the composition of the student cohort. The principles of equity and diversity are reflected in SISTC's suite of HR Policies relating to recruitment and selection; provision of culturally sensitive workplace arrangements (for example in relation to religious/worship requirements); and recognition and celebration of diversity groups.

Priority Equity Groups

As an important part of this commitment to providing opportunity to those who have barriers to higher education achievement, SISTC embraces Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples as a priority student cohort. SISTC will aim to recruit Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students as part of its domestic student cohort by offering targeted scholarships and culturally appropriate student support.

A key consideration in respect of this priority group is the ability to establish appropriate academic and personal support arrangements for students to ensure they have optimum opportunity for success. This involves a structured approach to:

- assessment of existing skill levels in areas of learning, cognition, language, expression and mathematics (to be arranged through contacts with Universities which are experienced in this area and have developed such assessment regimes);
- bespoke tutorial support for areas where particular academic assistance is appropriate (focused one-on-one where necessary);
- establishment of mentoring arrangements at the student and personal levels;
- connecting the students with their communities, and key elders/senior figures.

The SISTC approach is to develop a suite of support arrangements on a student-by-student basis, rather than to manage Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students on a generic cohort basis. Where appropriate, students are brought together for elements of individual study and support plans which are common in order to reinforce peer support from their fellow priority group members. Importantly however, students are encouraged and assisted to form networks with their wider student cohorts both within and outside SISTC.

Resourcing for the access and support arrangements outlined is provided by SISTC through its financial scholarships and respective budgets for academic support.

The equity and diversity provisions relating to students are enabled through the following operational elements:

Recruitment and Student Scholarships

- full financial scholarship assistance for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students within SISTC's target for this priority group
- the offering of educational places to students from a diversity of international (recruited on and off shore) backgrounds
- a commitment to provision of entry level and achievement-based scholarships which recognise educational achievement and supports it in a way which inter-alia mitigates access barriers associated with socio-economic status
- a commitment to English language support scholarships for students for whom language skills may otherwise be a prohibiting/limiting factor with regards to higher education access
- clear articulation of financial scholarship and other support programs to and for prospective students
- specialist English language support diagnostics at an individual student level.

Support Arrangements

- personal and academic mentor and community support for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students
- preparatory programs including access to English language/academic literacy and numeracy support programs
- tutorial/study support where necessary, over and above standard tutorial arrangements
- linkage to external cultural/community-based support groups/programs/ individuals.
- student support contact point/officer.

Support for students is also described in the SISTC Student Support Policy. SISTC is also committed to providing an environment for students which welcomes people with disabilities and special needs. This is supported through the SISTC Reasonable Adjustment Policy.

Workforce and Staffing

SISTC's strategies for recruitment and retention of staff is in alignment with its equity and diversity commitment, particularly the provisions for recruiting staff from a diversity of cultural backgrounds which aligns with the prospective student profile of SISTC. This also includes a commitment to recruiting female staff as part of SISTC's strategic intention to be an institution which provides a welcoming and supporting environment to female students. SISTC is also committed to providing a working environment which welcomes people with disabilities and special needs. This is supported through the SISTC Reasonable Adjustment Policy.

The equity and diversity provisions relating to staff are enabled through the following operational elements:

- a Workforce Plan which emphasises the recruitment of staff with cultural sensitivity and the skills to deliver education and support to a diverse student cohort
- explicit statement of SISTC's commitment to a diverse workforce in its promotional (including web site) and staff recruitment activities

Equity and Diversity Policy

- selection panels which reflect SISTC’s commitment to and aspirations for diversity in its student and staff cohorts
- HR policies and practices which are sensitive to cultural and religious considerations for an ethnically diverse work force.
